Greg Wheaton

Growing up in Brazil, Greg learned the “Beautiful Game.” Greg has played soccer at the professional level in South America, Africa, the Middle East, and in the US. Currently, Greg is the head coach of the men’s soccer program at University of Northwestern. He has also worked as the Coaching Director for Urban Stars and has assisted many clubs, including Metro United Homeschool Soccer, in development and training. His experience playing, teaching, and ability to demonstrate make him one of the area’s most qualified technical and tactical teachers of the game. Greg is a Premier Licensed coach with the NSCAA. More information on Greg’s other soccer camps and programs is available on his website www.isse.us.

Metro United Homeschool Soccer

Metro United offers 7th-12th grade soccer players an opportunity to compete with other homeschooled players during the fall high school season. We offer five teams: boys’ varsity, JV, and C; and girls’ varsity and JV. We hold tryouts in mid-August and play games against private and charter schools in the metro area and outskirts, with some out-of-state tournaments for the higher-level teams. The season runs through the end of October. Teams practice, train, and play 2-5 days per week. Our varsity girls and boys and JV boys teams end their season at the National Homeschool Soccer Championship in Indiana. More information on August tryouts and our fall program is available on our website www.MetroUnitedSoccer.org.

Metro United players will assist with this camp.
